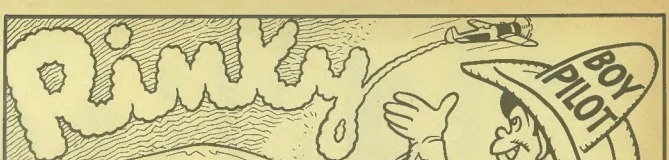
CARL ANDERSON'S

HENRY



ZZZOOOOOMMM! The airplane skimmed right over the Circle-O ranch house! Some of the horses in the corral galloped wildly about. The cowboys frowned darkly at the airplane.

Rinky's father grinned as the trim craft circled the ranch and headed into the wind. With scarcely a bump it landed, and taxied up to the spot where Rinky and his father were standing!

"How did you like the way it covers ground?" said the pilot, as he hopped nimbly from the plane.

"Sure does get around the ranch in a hurry!" Rinky's father said with a smile. "I'd like to go up for a ride before I decide whether to buy or not, though!" Father said as he looked at the two open cockpits in the plane.

"Get in the back seat and I'll take you right up!" That was the time for Rinky to really get excited. "Can I go up with you, Daddy?" pleaded Rinky.

"No, Rinky! This isn't a toy! Airplanes are only for adults!"

"I'll be very quiet and you won't even know I'm in the cockpit with you, Daddy! Please take me up with you!" Rinky pleaded.

"Oh, all right! But don't touch any of the controls!"

"Oh, never, Daddy!" Rinky cried as he jumped up and down with joy. "Let's go!" the pilot shouted as he waved to Rinky and Daddy to get into the back cockpit.

Quickly they climbed into the open cockpit and fastened the safety belt. Then the pilot turned and warned them, "Don't touch the controls, please! I'll just take you for a turn around the ranch. I won't do any stunting. Ready?"

"YES!" Rinky and Daddy both shouted as loud as they could over the roar of the engine. The plane sped down the field a short distance and zoomed into the air.

"WOW!" shouted Rinky, as he looked down at the Circle-O ranch. "We must be up as high as old Knobby Mountain!"

"Don't make so much noise, Rinky! You'll bother the pilot!" said Rinky's father with a frown.

Rinky looked at his father who was starting to grin oddly to himself. Suddenly, he winked at Rinky. Rinky couldn't imagine why father was winking at him. "What's the matter, Daddy?" Rinky asked.

"Nothing!" Father said. "Watch! I know how to fly a plane but I don't know how to land one. I'm going to use the controls in our cockpit and scare the pilot with some stunts!"

Rinky started to protest, as his mother had always told him never to play tricks on other people because sometimes it made them look very foolish. Of course, everyone knows we should never try to make other people look silly. It just isn't polite!

Daddy pulled the controls this way and that! SWOOSH! ZOOM! ZIP! The plane shot up high into the sky. It rolled over and over. Down close to the ground it dived. WHIZ! The plane made a great circle in the air.

Rinky's head was going 'round and 'round! He held on to his father as tightly as he could. Rinky's father was having the time of his life.

"HA, HA!" he laughed as he continued to tug at the controls. The plane turned seven fast circles and then leveled out. Rinky tapped his father on the arm and said, "Daddy . . ."

"Don't bother me right now, Rinky! I want to see the look on the pilot's face!"

Rinky was shouting now, "BUT LOOK AT THE MAN IN THE PARACHUTE FLOATING TO THE GROUND BELOW US!"

Father frowned and looked at the man swaying back and forth as he parachuted slowly toward the ground. "Hmmmm. I'd better tell the pilot about that fellow, Rinky! Wonder how he got out this way?"

"That's what I was trying to tell you, Daddy! The man in the parachute . . . HE WAS OUR PILOT!" exclaimed Rinky.

Rinky's father smiled broadly and said, "Oh, well, why didn't you say so, Rinky? I thought you said he was our . . . uh . . . PILOT! YIPE! YOU DID SAY HE WAS OUR PILOT!" Then Rinky watched in open-mouthed awe as his father's face turned different, strange colors. Father took one look over the edge of the cockpit and mumbled, ". . . and I don't know how to land this plane!" Then Father fainted!

Suddenly, the plane started plunging dizzily toward the ground which seemed to be spinning like a wild merry-go-round! "YOW-EEE!" Rinky shouted, "Here's where I become a PILOT . . . I HOPE!"

Rinky grabbed the controls and pulled and yanked. Still the plane headed for the ground. Rinky's father didn't move. "HELP," Rinky cried, as he gave one last mighty tug at the controls.

The plane barely missed crashing into a hillside. It zipped around the sky like a wild eagle. Faster and faster the plane went. Rinky's eyes popped as he looked at a house toward which the plane was diving.

Quickly, Rinky wrenched at the controls and at the very last instant the plane flipped up and over the house . . . but now Rinky was flying UPSIDE-DOWN!

Rinky's hair was standing on end and not just because the plane was upside-down. Straight ahead was the Circle-O ranch house. Rinky could see all the cowboys looking up as the plane approached.

Frantically, Rinky kicked and pulled at all the controls. KONK! KONK! The engine quit cold! Rinky could hear the wind whistle around the plane as it rocketed earthward. It was heading right for the barn!

Rinky threw one arm over his eyes and pulled hard on the control stick with the arm! The ground came rushing up rapidly and Rinky's teeth clattered like Spanish castanets. CLICK! CLICK! CLICKETY-CLICK! CLICK!

Rinky wasn't even looking when it happened! RAM! BRRANNGGG! The plane hit the ground in front of the barn and bounced right over it! After several more bumps and bounces the plane came to a quivering halt!

Rinky sat there shivering. His father sat up suddenly and said, "WE MADE IT!" Rinky couldn't speak! The cowhands and the pilot were running toward them when Rinky's father said anxiously, "Er . . . ah . . . don't tell them about my little joke, Rinky, and I'll buy the plane and take you up whenever you want to go! All right?"

Rinky could only gulp. The pilot rushed over and shook Father's hand. "That was great flying on your part, Sir! I forgot to fasten my safety belt. Something must have gone wrong with the plane! I guess you don't want to buy it now . . . I hope Rinky wasn't too frightened!"

Rinky's father grinned at Rinky. Then he said to the pilot, "I certainly do want to buy it! And don't worry about Rinky! He wasn't a bit scared, were you, Rinky?"

But Rinky, who was still several shades whiter than pure white, just gulped!
